Brookline — Brookline residents Paul and Saskia Epstein will be biking in the Rodman Ride for Kids on Saturday, Sept. 24, throughout southeastern Massachusetts. Their ride will benefit Room to Grow, a nonprofit organization that supports parents raising babies in poverty with one-on-one parenting guidance and essential baby items including new and nearly new clothing, educational toys, books and baby gear for the child's critical first three years of life.

Saskia Epstein is the executive director of this organization.

Paul Epstein will tackle all 100 miles to benefit his chosen charity of Room to Grow, which is one of nearly 50 organizations participating in this year’s ride.

Room to Grow is entirely privately funded, depending on the generosity of individuals, corporations and grants to prosper. The organization set a goal to raise $35,000 in this year's Rodman Ride. If the goal is met, Rodman organizers will match the total funds raised by 10 percent, allowing the organization to earn 110 percent of the donated funds.

To help the Epsteins’ pedal to success, please go to www.roomtogrow.kintera.org/ride and click on the rider's name.
